The financial services industry has undergone transformational change in recent years. Being well-versed in the basics is vital to building and applying knowledge to this fast-evolving industry. This series will provide a general overview of the regulatory regime applicable to banks and insurance companies, with a more detailed discussion of selected topics, and will equip participants with a comprehensive overview of the essentials of banking and insurance law.

Registration is open to anyone working in a financial institution or other financial intermediary.

OSFI B-10 third-party risk management fundamentals

Join our technology contracting lawyers in this session for a comprehensive overview of OSFI Guideline B-10 which outlines the expectations for managing third-party risks when federally regulated financial institutions outsource their business functions. Our panel will also take a look at the proposed revisions to the guideline, including the enhancement of third-party risk management expectations that reflect the technological advancements in the outsourcing environment.

This session will be presented in English.
